INTREP Project Nears Completion: Final Conference on June and National Conferences Scheduled for May

The INTREP project, dedicated to empowering entrepreneurial skills through innovation in interfaith contexts, is approaching the final stages of its implementation. Since its inception in February 2022, the project has worked diligently on the design and development of tools tailored to adult community teachers and educators.

As the project enters its final phase, the focus is now on the dissemination and utilization of its innovative results. The piloting phase has provided invaluable insights and opportunities to enrich the content of our national reports, ensuring that our project leaves a lasting impact.

Looking ahead, the INTREP project has planned a series of events to culminate its journey. A final international conference will be held in June, bringing together stakeholders, experts and practitioners to reflect on the project's achievements and discuss its future implications. In addition, several national conferences will be held beforehand to allow for in-depth discussions and localized perspectives on the project's results.

As the INTREP project draws to a close, anticipation is growing for its final events. With a commitment to fostering innovation and entrepreneurship in diverse communities, the project is poised to leave a lasting legacy in the field of adult education.
